THE JANUARY ISSUE OF THE
YALE REVIEW

CONTAINS

THE DEMOCRATS AND THE TARIFF

By HENRY C. EMERY

Chairman of the Tariff Commission under the administration of President Taft, and Professor of Economics at Yale University

This is a brilliant and authoritative statement of the efforts to revise the tariff under the last Congress, with side lights on the two parties in that session from a man who was in the midst of the controversy. Mr. Emery, in this paper, goes into what the next Congress is likely to do and what it can do. If it is pessimistic of popular applause over the results, from a lowered cost of living view point, the reader will discover the reason.

POPULAR ELECTIONS OF SENATORS

By MAX FARRARD

Professor of History at Yale University

A trenchant discussion of the historical background for the popular Senatorial vote issue. In it Mr. Farrard goes back to the Constitutional Convention of 1787 to show the trend of debate on the matter among the framers of the Constitution.

TRADITIONS IN GREEK LITERATURE

By GILBERT MURRAY

Professor of Greek at Oxford University

A remarkably interesting paper, discussing the limitations of modern knowledge of what the Greeks actually produced in their literature.

AND MANY OTHER PAPERS OF LITERARY AND SCIENTIFIC INTEREST

together with signed and authoritative book reviews.

Says the Educational Review for December, 1912: "One of the best reviews appearing in the United States is the Yale Review. Its broad scope, its literary standards, and its attractive appearance commend it to thoughtful and studious readers. Amid the great mass of worthless or worse than worthless publications, one turns with relief and satisfaction to the Yale Review for something that is really worth while for intelligent people to read."
